

Emerging Spirits Happy-nings

Reverend Jymmisms

Happy fall, happy harvest, happy Thanksgiving, This is a wonderful time to reflect and deepen in our prayers and meditations. A time to harvest the good and be grateful for all that we have, remembering that Gratitude is causative. Which means it will produce.

Expressing Gratitude for any situation projects a magnetic force that draws to you more of what you are expressing gratitude for. It is important to first accept responsibility for whatever is going on in your life.

The events, conditions and circumstances that you're currently experiencing are manifestations based on thoughts you entertained and emotions that you've chosen at some point in the past. It's due to those thoughts and emotions which represent seeds that were planted in the futile soil of your mind that you are experiencing whatever outcome you currently are having, or harvesting. Remember, you are the one that thinks your thoughts. Your thoughts do not think you. The emotions experienced serve as a gauge and are a reflection of the quality of thoughts that you are thinking.

Recognizing the fact that you brought them into your experience by the thoughts you maintained provides you with an understanding of your creative power. You are blessed and provided with the ability to choose what you will create for your life.

Although prior to understanding how this process works you were in essence "unconsciously creating", now you can begin to "consciously create" more to express gratitude for. More love, more peace, more harmony, more time, more God moments.

Your perceptions regarding any event, condition or circumstance are only based on a memory of something in the past that is stored in your subconscious mind and can be consciously changed if you discover that it is not in harmony with what you have a desire to accomplish. When you have developed a crystal clear understanding that all things work for the greater good no matter how seemingly bad things may appear it becomes much easier to stay in a state of gratitude. And that's where magic happens. I am grateful for my life and all the riches that I am experiencing in family, friends, work and knowing God is all there is!

Wayne Dyer Movies in November

Wednesday, November 8 6pm

Wayne Dyer Movie at Asilomar

This film is Wayne Dyer speaking at Asilomar to the attendees from United Centers of Religious Science. This 55 minute film shows how brilliant Wayne Dyer was. He shares about his movie "the Shift," that he was filming in Asilomar. He is funny, touching and shares his life from the 60's to 2008 when this was filmed.

Practitioner's Corner

Today is the first day of the rest of your life. This is not a theory; it must be true, because no one refutes it. No one has come back to say, don't go, it's a bummer there, everyone is unhappy. Not true. Not one return trip. Life is good even unto our last breath. However the theory that we live in an earth suit that only works on this plane is comforting. We put it on at the point of conception and remove it when our 'exit' point is reached. Discard it, may be a better word because a life well lived usually results in a really worn out earth suit. The eye function, olfactory, reproductive mechanisms, guidance and equilibrium functions (Tai-chi anyone?) and even some or all of the seals are failing. The beauty of a life well lived is not the failing earth suit, it is the memories that are filtered through our lens of time, when we can recall those most precious events. Those are the thoughts we treasure. Often the memories we recall the best are also the ones we recall most frequently, like the path to a special place or person that path becomes worn through frequent use. A beloved's birth, death, glory, growth, travels, loves; those are the memories most precious. We build that commemorative statue brick by life brick and when we cross, when we discard the earth suit, when we arrive on the 'other' side, we will have no regrets because it has been a life well lived. Happy living days!!

An Encounter with Nature

Returning from the back orchard, I walked along the edge of the pool and suddenly felt sadness as I noticed the body of a beautiful monarch with its wings completely outstretched floating on the surface of the water. Apparently the reflection of the sky in the water had created confusion and tragedy. The brilliant orange and black colors on its wings had become iridescent as they reflected the sunlight. There was a beauty present that words could not describe.

I did not want the water to bury the body of this beautiful creature that was born to soar so I knelt beside the pool, placed my hand gently beneath its floating body and removed it to the stone at the side of the pool.

As I knelt quietly as a witness to something so beautiful, suddenly its wings began to move ever so slightly. I was startled to realize life was returning to a body in which only a soul had been present before. As I witnessed this process, I became acutely aware there were no boundaries surrounding me or separating me from the monarch. We were simply in the presence of Spirit and experiencing grace that has no boundaries.

After its strength returned, I carefully cradled the monarch in my cupped hands, took it to the back garden and gently placed it beneath some nectar plants where it would have the shade and protection it needed during its recovery.

Quote for the day: God gave us monarchs so we can see angels.
